DESCRIPTION

The Black Bush is a charming, detached public house set in the very heart of Washington village. Surrounded by everyday amenities including a nearby school, church and a selection of shops all within comfortable walking distance, the pub enjoys a steady flow of regular trade. In addition, several established housing estates lie close by, providing a loyal and consistent customer base. Although Washington is officially part of Sunderland, it occupies a highly convenient position close to the city centres of Newcastle upon Tyne and Durham, as well as Sunderland itself. This central location makes it particularly appealing to both residents and visitors travelling from across the North East. Connectivity is a key strength, with excellent transport links ensuring easy access in all directions. The nearby A1(M) and A1231 provide swift road connections, while regular bus services and the Tyne and Wear Metro network further enhance accessibility. Overall, the Black Bush benefits from a great village location and strong local transport links, making it an attractive pub.

Pub Layout

On entering the Black Bush, customers are immediately welcomed by attractive décor that creates a warm and inviting ambience. The centrally positioned bar services all areas of the pub, providing both convenience and a natural focal point within the space. Directly in front of the bar, a mix of fixed and loose seating offers an ideal setting for casual drinking. Wall-mounted televisions screen live sporting events, while dartboards and a pool table encourage team games and social interaction, reinforcing the pub's vibrant community atmosphere. To the right-hand side, a relaxed drinking and dining area features a charming log fire, creating a cosy environment that flows seamlessly into a separate dining room. This additional space is well-suited for functions and entertainment, with a raised area to the rear that is particularly ideal for hosting live music performances. Externally, the pub benefits from a generous car park with capacity for up to twenty vehicles. A raised decking area to the side provides further outdoor seating during the

TRADING STYLE

The Black Bush is a popular community local offering an excellent range of food and drink. Predominantly wet led, the Black Bush has introduced team sports, televised sports and live music/karaoke increasing weekly trade. The pub currently offers a traditional food menu however with a more affordable offering alongside a children's menu, this has the scope to change the wet/dry balance and increase footfall. Marketing private functions and maximising the use of the large lounge which could be used as a separate function room along with introducing local charity events can only establish the Black Bush as the hub of the community.
