DESCRIPTION

The Nags Head is a charming Tudor-style pub located on the main road through the picturesque village of Stapleton, Leicestershire. Surrounded by idyllic English countryside, scenic walks, tranquil parks and rivers, the setting complements the pub's warm and inviting atmosphere—making it the perfect spot to enjoy a drink and a delicious meal, whether basking in the summer sun or settling in on a cosy winter evening. While the village offers all the essential amenities, the pub also benefits from excellent visibility and steady passing trade thanks to its prominent location on the main road.

Pub Layout

The Nags Head offers a charming blend of cosy comfort and spacious versatility. Inside, you'll find a snug bar area perfect for a relaxed drink comfortably accommodating approximately 15 customers, alongside a large and open dining space that can cater for approximately a further 30 people with ample loose seating—ideal for everything from intimate gatherings to larger parties. The décor is warm and traditional, with neutral tones that create an inviting atmosphere to unwind. Over the years, the pub has earned a strong reputation for serving quality food and regularly hosts popular entertainment and community events. Practicality is a key feature too. The cellar is conveniently located on the ground floor with easy access from the bar, and there's a fully equipped commercial kitchen, complemented by an external dry store and bottle store. Outside, the pub features a generous car park to the side, making it an easy stop for passing traffic. The expansive garden is a standout, dotted with classic wooden benches and framed by scenic paddocks, offering a picturesque setting for outdoor dining and events. An additional outbuilding houses an external bar and BBQ area, adding to the venue's appeal during warmer months.

TRADING STYLE

The pub currently operates with a strong focus on drinks (70/30 split), but there is significant untapped potential in the food offering. With a well-equipped commercial kitchen and an already popular food menu, there's a clear opportunity to elevate the food offer by introducing a fresh and creative menu. Additionally, the pub could further differentiate itself by expanding its drinks range and making better use of the dining room for events and special occasions.
