DESCRIPTION

The Plume of Feathers is a traditionally built pub, located on a corner plot on the main road, through the affluent village of Little Wymondley. The village is nestled between the busy Hertfordshire towns of Hitchin and Stevenage with a two minute drive to the A1 motorway and with great links into London making it a preferred village for wealthy commuters from the city. The village comprises of mainly residential property with a small convenience shop, another pub and some light industrial units. An Infant & Junior School are also located in the village.

Pub Layout

From the main road entrance, you will find the front beer terrace that accommodates approximately a dozen garden benches with parasols. Entering the building, a good sized bar serves you and serves a comfortable, well seated traditional lounge bar area with flagstone and tiled flooring, large inglenook fireplace and a quiet snug room. Adjacent is a large separate function room area, covered with an enclosed option by a stretch tent and side walls which is ideal for events, parties and showing live sport on a big screen. A further rear entrance leads to a small smoking shelter area with a vast car park beyond, that can park approximately 50/60 vehicles.

TRADING STYLE

Currently the Plume is operated mainly as a wet led traditional local with TV Sports, Pub Teams & Weekend Entertainment. The area is well known for its walkers and cyclists and a strong local community offers a steady stream of reliable custom. There is a small food offer daily and also for private functions, however as in previous years, there would be the opportunity for an enhanced food offer to encourage more regular diners into the pub. A more premium drinks variety would also add to the footfall at the pub and the ability for someone to build on the currently increasing function bookings would also add to the sometimes quieter day time trade and encourage further support of the local villagers.
